DIVIDEND PAYING Oil and Mining Stocks,

Other high grade 6 per cent. guaranteed interest preferred stocks and bonds for sale. OSAGE OILS; well No. 11, Lease 67, has been brought in during the month as an oil well equal to any on the lease and is now a good producer. Well No. 12, Lease 67, has been drilled and is flowing well. This makes 12 wells (independent of No. 13) on lease 67, owned by the four companies, drilled without a single "dry hole."

The four Osage Oil Companies owning the above wells have returned to stock holders during the year in monthly dividends, the sum of $36,000.00, against an actual investment in property and development of approximately $66,000.00, with a handsome surplus yet remaining in their profit and for extra dividends, subject to the action of the stockholders at their annual meetings to be held in January.

Withdrawal of oil stocks; the stock of the four companies have been entirely withdrawn from the market. An announcement will probably be made no later than January 15, of the entire withdrawal from the market of the stock of the Interstate Osage Petroleum Co., which will begin dividends in January at the same rate as the other four Osage Petroleum Companies. This Company was demonstrated by its four wells already brought in that it has an earning capacity, with development, equal if not in excess of the four Osage Petroleum Companies first operating in the Barlow District, and it has a surplus in its profit fund of practically $3,000 at the present time available for dividends. Any customer desiring to secure this stock will have to send in their subscriptions prior to the date of its withdrawal.

The Interstate Osage Petroleum Co. now has in its profit fund approximately $3,000, against an investment in the property and development of same of less than $21,000, which we think is a remarkable record for the Osage properties for 1905.

BIG SALE OF TOBACCO

Over $250,000 Paid to the Farmers by Mr. Jarrett In Past Few Weeks.

ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK.

Farmers Will Certainly Receive Good Prices For Another Year

Farmers belonging to the Tobacco Association must be "believing on easy street" now. The patience they have manifested and their confidence in the men who have been working so long to pull them out of the hole they have been in has met with a rich reward. They are now the dictators as to prices, and start out in the new year under the most encouraging circumstances. Buoyed up by their triumph over the trust, they will be more loyal, if possible, to the organization than ever. Everything for 1906 seems to point to a most successful year.

The wheat crop is reported as looking unusually fine, the tobacco growers are carrying plethoric purses, the aggregate individual indebtedness of the county is probably lower than for a quarter of a century, and with the exception of heavy loss of hogs from cholera by a few, the outlook for another year of plenty and prosperity was never more propitious.

Mr. Charles F. Jarrett, the county salesman, has paid to the farmers of this county over $250,000 in cool cash for the tobacco that was put under control of the Tobacco Association. This has been done in the past five weeks, and Mr. Jarrett sees great things for the Association in the future. He ought to have, and doubtless has, the lasting gratitude and confidence of the tobacco raisers, not only of his own county, but everyone having anything to do with tobacco. He has served the farmers faithfully and never held out a hope that his judgment did not lead him to think would, under the new order of things, be realized. Mr. Jarrett says that the Association now has on hand but three hogsheds of the weed and that will soon be disposed of. The sale of 600 hogsheds he has already made this month has been at most satisfactory prices and probably before the first of February the whole stock will be closed out at like good prices.

Everybody wishes the farmer a prosperous year, and when the farmer prospers everybody shares it with him.

In New Office

County attorney J. C. Duffy is now "at home" in the county attorney's office adjacent to the Court House. Senator Rives will office with him after March 20th.

William Wallace, a much respected colored man of this city, died Thursday, at his home on Jackson street. He was 80 years old.

NEW OFFICES

Will Soon Be Ready For City Officials.

The new offices at the city building are being given the finishing touch this week, by the painters and paper-hangers. The clerk's office, chief's office and the police headquarters on the first floor have been nicely papered and new stoves have been put in the two new rooms. The Mayor's offices above are also being newly papered and have been provided with a new stove. They will be ready for occupancy by next week. The two rooms have a double door between them and can be thrown into one.

Crossings Swept.

A small force was put to work yesterday sweeping the crossings at the different intersections of streets in the business portion of the city. The improvement of conditions, however, did not last long, as passing teams soon covered the crossings again. It is simply impossible to put streets in good condition during the prevalence of such weather as we have had for the past four days.

INCREASE OF FIVE MILLIONS

In the Tax List of the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Co.

MANY OTHER INCREASES

All Cited to Appear Jan. 22 and Show Cause, if Resisted.

The county tax supervisors have been in session this week and have sent out many notices of increases in assessments. One of these is against the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Co., increasing its assessment from $87,500 to $5,000,000. This company is now capitalized, according to recent reports, at $17,000,000. Revenue Agent Lucas recently made an attempt to assess the company for back taxes on $5,000,000. County Attorney Duffy has had the county assessment placed at the same figures and the city assessor will also be directed to assess the company at something near its real property value, as this is the home office of the corporation. Of course there is liable to be prolonged litigation over the question. The board will hear protests Jan. 22.

NEW HOSE BOUGHT.

Fire Committee Makes Badly Needed Investment.

Acting under a resolution adopted at the recent meeting of the city council, the Fire Department Committee on Thursday purchased 1200 feet of new fire hose at 80 cents per foot. Attachments were also bought to the value of about $35. There were present at the meeting of the committee representatives from five different houses and the Committee did some close trading. The present hose, from long and hard service has become very indifferent and frequent breaks seriously interfered with the work of the department. The new supply will be received within the next thirty day.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Wife of Colored Preacher Dropped Dead Thursday Night.

Delia Campbell, colored, dropped dead in her home in the south-eastern part of the city last Thursday night. The summons came unexpectedly to her husband and friends. Apparently she was in good health, being at church last Sunday. She was the wife of George Campbell, a Baptist preacher, and was a great worker in her church.

Tobacco Coming In.

The damp, warm weather has been favorable for the delivery of loose tobacco. Every day has been taken advantage of and there have been heavy deliveries at the different places of storage.

The Weather

For Kentucky:—Cloudy and unsettled conditions Saturday.

WEALTHY CITIZEN,

Formerly of Hopkinsville,
Dies Suddenly in St. Louis.

Mr. Moses L. Elb received a message Thursday morning from St. Louis announcing the death of his uncle, Col. Hirsch, a wealthy citizen of that place, formerly of Hopkinsville. Mr. Elb left at once for St. Louis to attend the funeral. Mr. Hirsch died rather suddenly of heart trouble. He was 71 years old and is survived by his widow and ten children—eight daughters and two sons.

Mr. Hirsch was formerly engaged in business here, being a member of the firm of Lewis Elb & Co., and had large property interests in Hopkinsville. He moved to St. Louis about 40 years ago, and had amassed a large fortune in the iron business.

INCREASED

Interest is Manifest at Methodist Church Services.

Rev. P. H. Davis is preaching to a crowded house at the Methodist church and there is a manifest increase in interest on the part of the unconverted, and the Christians have become aroused. While there is nothing approaching the coarse in Mr. Davis, yet there is a great deal of originality about him. His remarks are pungent thoughtful and convincing, and he always presents something that puts his hearers to thinking. The meetings are just fairly begun and will continue through the coming week and longer as Dr. Lyon says no set time for closing was fixed when the meetings were arranged for.

BUSINESS DULL.

Snow and Rain, Slush and Mud, Deaden Trade.

Snow enough to cover the ground fell Wednesday but was followed by rain. The snow was melted, the sidewalks were covered with slush and the streets with mud. Though the streets have been repeatedly cleaned off, they are in a wretched condition owing partly to the street improvements that have been going on for some time. How the street cars would pay such weather as this, if we had them! Clerks are having a busy time—dusting down and straightening up.

STEADY IMPROVEMENT

In Condition of the Self-Wounded Officer.

Since the removal of the bullet from Officer Chas. E. Hord's back a day or two ago, his improvement has been steady and he is now considered well on the road to recovery. He will be up in a few days, but not able to resume his place on the force for some time.

Dr. Hill's Condition.

Dr. William Hill, who has been lying in what has been considered a critical condition for weeks, was not supposed by his physician to be in immediate danger of death yesterday, though he is delirious a good part of the time. The venerable physician may linger for months, but there is no reason for hoping for his ultimate recovery, and his death may occur at any time.

FARM FOR SALE.

A fine farm, being the two farms known as the Harselson and Johnson places in the third civil district of Montgomery county, Tenn., consisting of 460 acres. Over 300 acres of cleared land and the remainder in timber. Land lies well and is in a splendid State of cultivation. (Newly fenced). It is conveniently watered, having a creek running in one end of it, and a pond and two wells (one a bored well 138 feet deep) on the other end. The I. C. R. R. runs through the creek end of the farm, and depot and side track only 1/2 mile from the house, 1/2 mile from Clarksville and Hopkinsville turnpike and six miles from Clarksville city limits.

This farm is splendidly adapted to the raising of stock, cattle, hogs, corn, hay, wheat and tobacco. Has a two-story five room residence, four cabins, large stable, machine and implement house, two stock barns with a capacity of over one hundred and twenty head. Over fifty head of cattle (thoroughbred shorthorns) two fine brood mares, ten mules, 16 H. P. traction engine and separator (good as new) corn shredder, mowers, binders, plows, harrows, hay rake, riding cultivator and all tools in use on a modern, well conducted farm. Crops of hay, corn and wheat raised on the farm last year. One hundred acres in wheat now.

Will sell farm with all that is on it as set out above, or will sell place and reserve personally. For price and terms see or write to

I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung trouble." Sold by Cook & Higgins.

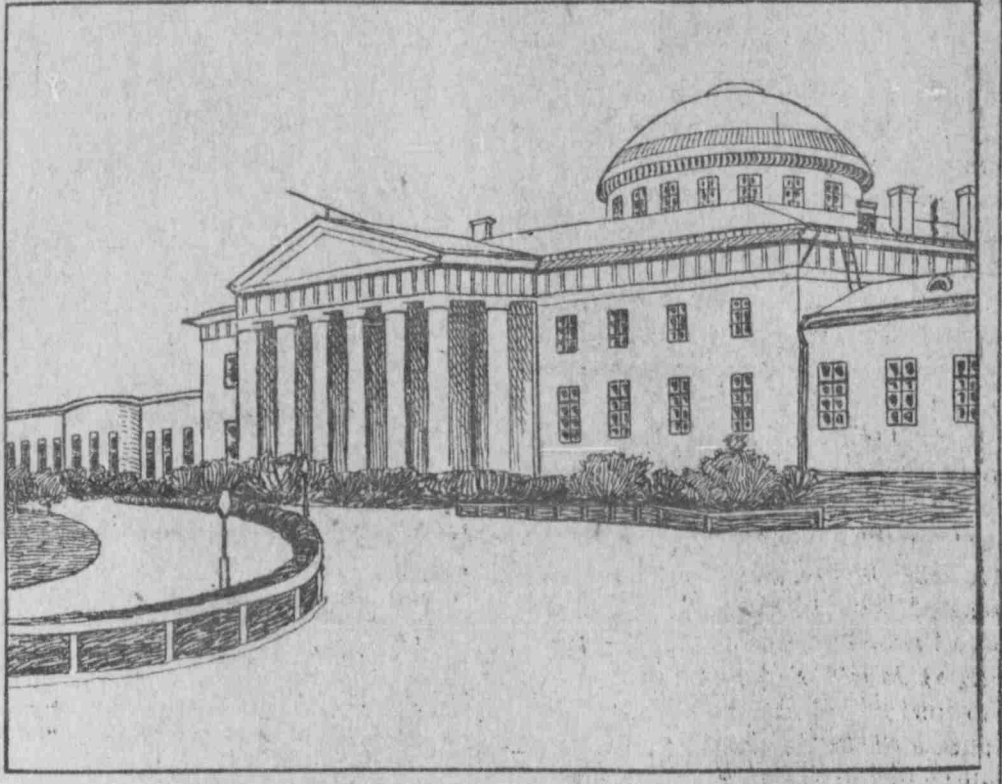

Friend of the People and Counsellor of the Czar

The Man Who Holds the Gravest of Responsibilities—Forcefulness and Opportunities Gifts Bestowed Upon Serge Yulevitch Witte.

The careless observer might call Witte physically a commonplace person, a big man of stouthy carriage, ordinary features, sleepy, bored-looking eyes. But in spite of commonplaceness of appearance, the man after all appears individual, striking, noticeable. That unmistakable quality called force has marked him for his own, wherever he goes he stands apart, a man to be counted upon, a man not to be downed.

When the steamer bearing the Russian peace commissioners approached our land that day last summer, and the newspaper men and artists boarded her, though there were many celebrities, many distinguished men on board, the object of chief interest was the distinguished looking, the commonplace—save for the bigness—stranger to our shores, the Russian Serge Yulevitch Witte. The newspaper men, who ought to know a personality when they come across it, picked out Witte at once.

In a most interesting article in the New York Times under the interesting title: "Rise of Count Witte—A Romance of History," the writer says in his introduction: "When Serge Yulevitch Witte was born at Tiflis 56 years ago he was blessed by two fairies who seldom combine their gifts. The fairy who gives Forcefulness and the fairy who confers Opportunity. Very seldom, perhaps once in a single century, do these two fairies take a child under their protection, and when this happens that child, no matter what his restraints his handicaps his lack of those things that make for success, conquers and prevails. "Nothing can stand against him."

We like this explanation of this great man's marvelous rise from obscurity to first statesman of Russia—of the day of the century—we all carry along with advancing years a belief in those cradle fairies, a belief that great men are born, not made. And this picture of the two gifts of Genius and Opportunity is doubly interesting.

We must not exaggerate the picture, however, put Witte in the list of those that have risen from lowest origin. His father was an official, his mother connected with one of the oldest of Russian noble families. But it is true to say they were obscure, the father but a minor official. And when Witte married and chose as wife a Jewess, member of the race so unpopular, so despised, we understand that he rather seriously handicapped himself socially.

In early days there seemed nothing to look forward to beyond a small position in a small town; it is probable when young Witte became a student at the University of Odessa he had in view some professorship as his place in life. But he was not destined to the teaching profession, not destined to the small town, was to deal with large matters, have grasp of a wide empire. Witte was born way down in Trans-Caucasia, and after graduation from the University of Odessa entered the service of a railway in the south of Russia. The railway company was owned by the Russian Steamship company, a company that from the first seemed to appreciate the abilities of this particular young man in its employ, for he was advanced from post to post, at length became general superintendent.

But all was not to be smooth sailing; a serious accident occurred on the railway, the superintendent was held accountable and summoned to St. Petersburg to give evidence at an official investigation. As happens occasionally, failure led to success. The officials of the ministry of finance were impressed—as were the newspaper men at Hoboken—by the forcefulness of the man Witte. They pressed acquaintance with him, their faith rose; he was offered, and accepted, a position on one of the government lines, could afford to hand in his resignation to the other company.

Another disaster helped Witte on, this time helped him far on. We have reference to the Russo-Turkish war (1877-78), and the incompetence exhibited in the beginning by the Russian railway department; incompetence and corruption not surpassed by anything displayed even by the government departments which are held responsible for Russia's recent disasters in the far east. It looked as though the campaign would be a fiasco before it was begun because of the pitiful incapacity of the railway officials. They did not know how to move the troops, no one could tell where any particular regiment was, soldiers were sent on long journeys without food—everything was in a state of chaos.

The St. Petersburg authorities were helpless. It seemed that they had no one to whom to turn who was capable of unraveling the tangle. At length somebody remarked that there was one small section of the country in which things seemed to be going right. Inquiry was made, and it was found that the lines over which Serge Witte had control were running with no hitches, that difficulties passed on to Witte by officials elsewhere were being straightened out. What to do was obvious. Witte was summoned to St. Petersburg and returned to the Crimea with greatly extended powers. He was stationed at Odessa, and in a short time things were running with machine-like precision.

Witte was now no longer obscure, was coming to the fore rapidly. Again disaster quickened the progress. An accident to a train carrying the czar led to the resignation of the minister of ways and means. Witte was appointed to the post. As minister of ways and means he at once began plans for the Trans-Siberian railway, and later as minister of finance carried out these plans. But we must tell how he came to hold the portfolio of finance. When the incumbent of that post was incapacitated by illness longer to retain it, the czar selected this official and that to take his place. The first requested that M. Witte be appointed as chief assistant, the second replied he would assume the duties on condition he was given the aid of M. Witte. One and all said, the same thing; and, as the Times writer remarks: "Even a czar of Russia can see clearly if the object is sufficiently plain, and the upshot was that the ministry was offered to Witte."

The sum of his accomplishments as minister of finance has been told in recent months; the world knows that in the short space of ten years he increased the revenues of the country by $500,000,000 a year; that he built the great Trans-Siberian railway; that a Russian merchant marine was created; manufactures were encouraged in the hitherto commercially unprogressive country; the sale of liquor was made a government monopoly; a steady currency was substituted for a fluctuating currency, foreign capital and foreign manufacturers were invited to Russia.

And for months we have heard the wonderful story of M. Witte at the peace conference, of the peace of Portsmouth and the undreamed of terms obtained for Russia, thus made victorious after defeat. And now we are watching the work of this man in tremendously troubled Russia, the great leader in the difficult role of friend of the people and counsellor of the czar.

It is well it is upon the most powerful figure in the empire has been placed, what the Salt Lake Tribune calls the gravest responsibility thrust upon a man in recent times. "The difficulties Witte has to face are almost endless. He has against him the court, a powerful bureaucracy, the army, the reactionary party, and the anarchists. With him are the liberals and the intelligent classes and a very feeble, impatient and suspicious public." The czar and Count Witte stand for civil liberty, but disrupted Russia finds it not easy to agree on the meaning of the words. "Anarchy is the ideal of some; nihilism was long the watchword of many; socialism is the goal aimed at by a large part of all the leaders; and, perhaps most serious difficulty of all, the notions probably entertained by the great mass of ignorant followers of the leaders are of a vagueness and crudeness—compounded, as they are of a sense of economic suffering and a desire for political rights."

Dressing for Damages

A Story of Law and Lawyers

One of the Cook county courts the other day sat an exquisitely dressed woman. Her gown was a dead black cloth. She wore the daintiest of black bonnets. A white tie, her white face, the aristocratic little hands ungloved and a small white lace handkerchief only served to emphasize the pitifulness of the little figure—and, oh, yes! She wore a single heliotrope in the lapel of her close-fitting coat. During all the long hours that her case was before the court she scarcely looked up once, and never once did her glance stray about the room. She seemed absolutely crushed.

She was the defendant against a long and formidable array of charges that contemplated moral perversity of an unusual nature. The testimony as it was poured out by witness after witness was quite as formidable as were the charges themselves. Yet all the while she sat with downcast eyes, a living picture of innocence and woe.

The jury seemed almost brutally big and massive and masculine to try so wee a woman.

Her attorney, one of the ablest at the Chicago bar, appeared oblivious of the law court, and while every good lawyer would far rather lean on "the law and the evidence," there are times like those quoted when appearances have got to count against testimony, and it has come to be an unwritten law that an attorney's duty extends to his clients' wardrobe and "make-up" in court.

"It used to be a rule," said one of Chicago's great criminal lawyers, when questioned about this matter of "dressing for damages," "that a lawyer should take the case of anyone who wished to employ him, even if the client confessed his guilt, and do the very best to clear him. Now, however, many attorneys will not take a case unless they are assured of the client's innocence. You know the advice the old law professor gave his class: 'If you have the law on your side, stick to that. If you have the evidence, harp on that; and if you have neither law nor evidence, holler like hell!' Well, it's the same about this thing of appearances in court. It's the duty of a lawyer to make the most of every detail he can command, and I have no doubt that many lawyers on occasion coach their clients about 'dressing for the jury,' as it might be called.

"But there is almost always the danger of a faux-pas in making up for the part. Once, I recall, a man sued a corporation that I was representing for damages for the loss of his wife in a wreck. On the crucial day the plaintiff came into court dressed most solemnly in black, with even a crepe band on his hat. His face, too, was dressed in a most woe-begone style, mouth down at the corners, eyes sad, with a far-away look and a real or well-gotten-up pallor. But he neglected his necktie, which was a most vivid and aggressive red. I was able to completely spoil his whole mourning get-up by pointing to his gay necktie, and exposing his shallow attempt to work upon the sympathy of the jury, got a verdict which threw him out of court.

"But there is less danger of a break when the client is a woman. Women are better actors than men, and they are strong on tears. Now, if that little woman the other day had been a man, the heliotrope boutonniere would have been brazen and impudent—no matter what garb he wore—but with the little woman every juror would say to himself: 'Poor little thing, she is trying to brave it out with that little flower!' No lawyer ever got her up. It was a woman's wit that did that. It was too subtle for a man, or if a man he was drawing on some experience he had had with a woman."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CLEVER SCHEME OF JAPS.

Cable Rates Circumvented by Them During the Portsmouth Peace Conference.

"There are not many people who can get ahead of a telegraph company," said a correspondent who came back to Washington from Portsmouth, "but I suspect that the Japanese correspondents managed it during the peace conference. You know that cable rates to Japan are pretty heavy, and there was as much as $1.25 a word paid on some of the urgent messages, while about 58 cents was the lowest press rate. The correspondents were sending a lot of matter, and, of course, the Japanese messages had to be translated in a way before they could be sent. The Morse code can't cope with the 57,000 ideographs that the Jap language is made up of, so the Jap correspondents used to write the messages phonetically in English characters and send their messages in that way. They were read off and transferred to Japanese type in Tokio. Of course, the telegraph company could not read them, and as the limit in size for a cable word is 15 letters, the Japs used to divide their messages up regularly into English letters in blocks of 15. No word was ever longer or shorter than 15 letters, and the cable company had to take it that way and stand for it.

"The chief operator used to kick and complain occasionally, but he could not go back of the explanation that each of the 15 letter groups was a Japanese word spelled phonetically. But he swore Japanese was the most queerly regular language he ever saw. Of course, the cable bills were pretty high at that.

"But the cable company probably made less out of the Japanese than they did out of any of the other correspondents. The Russian alphabet is made up of non-English letters, but it can be sent in Morse, and there were some operators who could do it, though the most of the Russian messages were written either in French or English.

"It is a wonder to me," said a state department clerk, who was listening to the story, "that the Japs did not use their code book. At least there is one in China, and I suppose there is one in Japan. You know the Chinese characters cannot be cabled any more than can the Japanese, but they get over that difficulty by having in every Chinese telegraph office a simple code, in which the message is written with numerals. Each page of the code book is divided into 58 squares, numbered in sequence, and in each square is a Chinese word, the commoner words coming among the lower numbers. When the telegram is written the sender simply puts down the number of the square in place of the word it contains, and the message is decoded in the same way at the other end. There are 9,999 words, and that is enough for the average vocabulary of the man who wants to send a telegram. I do not know whether this method would have been cheaper than the 15-letter scheme of the correspondents, but it is possible if they had used code the company would have cut them down to five figures for each word, as that is the limit on code messages."

fact that he was in court all but defenseless. He had but two witnesses; one was a large motherly woman who told how she had cared for the little woman when she was a motherless orphan. The other witness was the defendant's pastor—who said he had "ministered to her spiritual wants" on one or two occasions.

After all the witnesses had been heard the prosecutor made his appeal to the jury, heaping up the damning evidence, it seemed almost needlessly high, and wound up by warning the jury not to be swayed by the innocent appearance of the defendant. "It's all a sham," he cried. "She is a brazen and wanton malefactor."

As he shouted the last words, standing almost directly over the small defendant and shaking his big finger almost in her face, she looked up at him for just the fraction of a moment, while two big tears started down her cheeks. Then her eyes sought the floor again.

Her own attorney never mentioned the evidence except in a general and deprecatory way. His half hour was occupied in telling the jury how he came to take the case—a duty to his conscience, he said it was. She had told him all about her life and she had not failed to tell him of the circumstances that would show up against her. But in the face of it all he knew she was innocent—else he would not be there, and his faith in human nature was so great that he was willing to give her case into the keeping of that jury—each man to judge her as his heart might dictate.

The jury retired. It was not necessary, but it looked better. In a quarter of an hour the jurors filed in, handed a paper to the clerk, who read: "We, the jury, find the defendant not guilty," and the little woman followed her attorney out of the courtroom and into the street.

On the very same day a New York paper published the following special telegram:

"Springfield, Mass.—Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, the young Brooklyn woman forger, whose smiles and blushes and faultless attire made a deep impression upon the authorities, to-day was released upon probation by the superior court. Her husband, destitute of good looks and possessing only a moderate wardrobe, was sentenced to the Massachusetts reformatory."

These two cases are types that have been of unwritten interest to lawyers the world over since the law came to be a science—or art. They are types of what a London paper recently called "dressed for damages."

While there is no "chair" in any well-regulated law school set apart to discuss millinery, or tears, or fair, and faces, yet every lawyer recognizes the potency of these little incidentals in a

A Frankfort dispatch says the state capital commission started the legislature Wednesday by presenting its report showing the progress of the work and the need of more money than has been appropriated heretofore. The commission thinks that it will take $1,500,000 additional to complete and equip the building ready for use. The last legislature appropriated $1,000,000, which many thought would be sufficient to construct the building. It is not probable that the legislature will grant the sum asked by the commission, though it will certainly add largely to the appropriation already made. It is estimated that it will take all of $2,500,000 to complete the capital according to the present plans.

Representative Ollie James has introduced a bill to provide for the extradition of refugees upon requisition from the Governor of the State from which the refugee has fled. The bill provides that when a fugitive is demanded and a copy of the indictment or an affidavit made before a magistrate charging crime is filed with the requisition is not honored, the Governor making it can file before any Circuit or District Federal Judge a copy of the indictment and the Judge shall issue a writ to bring the fugitive before said court, who shall issue a commitment requiring the Federal Marshal to turn the fugitive over to the demanding Governor, appeal shall lie in the Supreme Court.

Chairman R. B. Bradley has called a meeting of the Democratic District Committee for next Wednesday, in Madisonville, for the purpose of calling a primary or convention to nominate a candidate for Congress. The Journal says the probable date will be about April 1. A very early primary will be to the disadvantage of Congressman Stanley, and also of Representative Mun Wilson—if his talk of running is to go beyond a joke—and is liable to have a contrary effect to the one intended.

CIGARS KEPT SINCE 1861.

Manufacturers, Unwilling to Pay Tax on 18,000, Now Dead—Revenue Officials Puzzled.

Reading, Pa.—The attention of the local internal revenue office has been called to an unusual case. Reuben Keinert, a cigar manufacturer, died recently in Hereford, this county. Stored at his home are 18,000 cigars that were made before the civil war, and the administrator of his estate is now wondering what to do with them. In addition to the cigars there is sufficient leaf tobacco to fill a four-horse wagon.

Keinert had the 18,000 cigars on hand when the government, needing money to carry on the war, passed the revenue law which made it necessary to put several dollars' worth of stamps on each 1,000 cigars. Mr. Keinert was opposed to this and declined to buy stamps. As a result he could not sell his cigars and for 45 years they have been stored.

About the time that the stamp law was passed he was offered $2,000 in gold for the cigars, but he declined to sell, thinking that as soon as the war was over the revenue law in regard to the cigars would be repealed. With each recurring congress he expected this to happen, but each time the aged cigar-maker was disappointed.

After nearly half a century he died, with the revenue law in force and his 18,000 cigars in storage. They are in excellent condition. Friends of the deceased say he was a stubborn man and would never dispose of anything unless he secured his price.

Since Mrs. Clarence Mackey became school commissioner in Roslyn, she wished to make a birthday present to one of the children, a little girl. "I'll give you a doll," she said. "Thank you." "And what kind of a doll?" "Twins, please." Twins it was.

SONG OF BALDHEADED MAN.

Great Caesar's classic head was bare,
And ivory shorn hair.
Peter and Paul were forced to wear
This capillary hair.
Shakespeare, earth's literary king,
And Johnson, Pope and Gibbon,
Being short of hirsute covering
Wore wigs tied with ribbon.

But Achan, J. Iscariot,
Ananias of truth (chary),
Herod, the Pharisees I weel,
All sported capitis hairy.
Later came Pontius, Robespierre,
And Marat, bloody trio;
Guy Fawkes and Jeffries, Glenoe Stair,
Thick-thatched like adding Nero.

Nor will the eye, in youth, oft see
Bald Hattentot or Arab,
Kamchatkan, aborigine,
Kurd or man-eating Carib;
Nay, nay, but of the human breed
The greater in earth's story,
Are those who lead in thought and deed
Crowned not with hair, but glory!
—Monroe Guy Carleton, in N. Y. Sun.

THE NOSE HOLDERS

By T. P. MORGAN

THIRTY-ONE saints in bags. A suffering sinner with a huge spring clothes-pin snapped onto each ear, one on his nose, another on his lower lip, several hanging from his fingers, and twice as many more without places to hang on.

The victim of the clothes-pin was the inventive clerk of the Duffy house. The saints in bags were the 31 most prominent members of Elder Blowhorn's following.

Besides being clad in bags, the saints were adorned by numerous abrasions and bruises, caused by the events that followed the practical application of the clerk's little invention for causing involuntary snoring.

After prolonged and unique reasoning, the clerk proved to his own satisfaction that snoring was greatly conducive to the preservation of health. His theory was simple enough, too. From careful observation, he had learned that the more robust the person, the more lusty and resonant was his snore. Weak persons snored in a weak, coy way, as if they had not learned to play on their nose harps very well. But the stalwart ones, strong of wind and sturdy of torso, would utter a few preliminary diapason notes, run up and down the scale a couple of times, and then, striking the proper key, dash into the popular tune of "I am dreaming of thee, Nora, darling."

Following out this line of reasoning, the clerk very soon reached the conclusion that, in order for weak ones to become healthier, they must snore more. If they would not snore, they must be made to.

Ever long, the clerk's little invention for the promotion of involuntary snoring was complete. It was modeled after and very much resembled the pinching variety of clothes-pin, which, when it seizes anything, hangs on with the tenacity of a snapping-turtle.

All that is necessary to make a sleeper snore is to cause him to breathe through his mouth. The idea was that, when one of these nose holders was snapped on the victim's bill, he would either breathe through his mouth or choke. And, if he breathed through his facial gash, he would snore, and the utility of the clerk's little invention would be demonstrated.

So pleased was the clerk with his idea that he constructed nearly half a bushel of nose holders before he made a trial of

HE CLASPED THE COMPRESSORS ON THE BILLS OF THE SAINTS. The invention except upon his own nose, where it worked to his intense satisfaction, and nearly pinched his beak off at the same time.

Conceiving the idea that the ordinary springs were too modest in asserting themselves, he substituted springs so strong that it took pronounced pressure upon the opposite ends of the holder to open them for the reception of the waiting proboscis.

For several days before the completion of the invention, the clerk had had his mental vision fixed on the subjects for a wholesale experiment. These were several of the most prominent followers of Elder Blowhorn and the doctrine by him taught at the camp, just out of town.

By some means, the clerk had learned that, owing to the limited number of sleeping-tents, and the unexpected arrival of a large delegation of believers from other localities, a number of the brethren were obliged to pass the night on cots in the large audience tent in which services were held in the daytime. It was upon the noses of this collection of saints the clerk resolved to experiment.

Not that they lacked in health or muscularity, for most of them looked as if they had a decided banking after the flesh-pots of Egypt; but because he wanted to ascertain the different effects upon different individuals and noses, so that the tension of the springs might be increased or diminished to suit all requirements.

Several different days had been set for the end of the world, and they had awaited its coming with all the anxiety felt by spectators around a sick horse. But as each date had failed to witness the interesting event, they grew apprehensive that it might walk in upon them at any time.

All day long their ascension robes hung on handy nails, and at night they slept in them.

In order that the rush of wind, consequent upon so many people going up at once, might not blow their robes up over their heads, the garments were sewed together at the bottom, making of each a long bag with sleeves in it.

When the clerk, with his half-bushel or so of nasal-pinchers, arrived at the big tent, just before midnight, he found 31 saints sleeping within, each in his ascension bag, and with his face upturned to the dim light of the solitary lantern. The inventor fairly begged himself with delight at the flattering prospects of a successful wholesale experiment.

As noiselessly as a spook, he tiptoed from cot to cot, clasping the compressors on the bills of the saints.

He had hardly retired to the pulpit, to watch the effects of the experiment, before the inventions began to get in their particularly fine work. The mouths of the sleepers flew open in one grand snore. A moment later, the pinching of his beak aroused one of the more wakeful sleepers, and finding his nose in the grasp of some imaginary demon, he sprang up in affright, tumbled down, and knocked over and extinguished the lantern.

The rumpus aroused the others, who, feeling their beaks in the clutches of something, and thinking that at last the long expected occasion had arrived and Satan was already endeavoring to drag them off, leaped up with loud cries, and endeavored to rush out where they could go straight up without having to cut holes in the tent.

In a moment they were all down, and saints and cots were tangled in inextricable confusion. Then, as it dawned upon each that the object upon his bill was a large clothes-pin, he forgot his desire to ascend in his thirst for revenge.

SAINTS AND COTS WERE TANGLED IN INEXTRICABLE CONFUSION.

venge. The sewed-up bottoms of their robes prevented their locomotion, and all they could do was to scramble to their feet and tumble down again, fighting all the time the demons in bags. Each thought himself the victim of a joke upon the part of his neighbor, and was fully determined to get even for the unseemly meddling with his sacred proboscis.

Frightened at the unexpected workings of his inventions, the clerk endeavored to escape in the darkness, but only succeeded in getting into the very midst of the maelstrom, where he speedily found himself beaten and rolled on scandalously.

Two saints, finding that he had not on a robe, held him fast and shouted to the rest, who speedily suspended hostilities. The lantern was relighted, and in spite of the struggles and remonstrances of the inventor he was held by two brothers, while others snapped the nose holders onto his ears, nose, lips and fingers.

A rope was produced, and, to the clerk's terrified eyes, it seemed as if they were about to hang him. Strengthened by fear, he jerked away from the saints who held him, rushed against and over two of the brethren, and burst headlong through the side of the tent, wholly ignoring the opening provided for egress.

As well as they could, the ascensionists hopped and tumbled outside and saw the clerk disappearing with the speed of a quarter-horse and shedding nose pigs at every jump.

Presently he went out of sight in the moonlight, in the direction of the Duffy house, and the 31 bagged saints returned to their cots to await the end of the world.—Good Literature.

FLAGS GUARD PROPERTY.

Reading Woman Imitates Barbara Frietchie and Wins Over Supervisors.

Reading, Pa.—Mrs. Marie Wagonhorst, of Longswamp, proved herself Berks county's Barbara Frietchie.

"Shoot, if you must, this old gray head, but the man who takes one of the flags away from the front of my property will run up against a bunch of trouble."

So, in effect, if not in so many words, said Mrs. Wagonhorst when Supervisor Farley attempted to open a gutter in front of her dwelling.

No sooner had the official staked out a line for a new gutter in front of the building than she secured seven American flags and stuck them in the ground along the line.

She then procured a shotgun and she took up a position on her porch and dared the supervisor and his assistants to go ahead with their work. After a long parley they gathered together the implements of their trade and decamped with more haste than grace.

Though the field of battle had been cleared, Mrs. Wagonhorst remained on guard for some time.

PROPERTY WORTH $151

James Monroe Young's In debtredness Amounts to $3,61

James Monroe Young, of Hopkinsville, who gives his occupation as that of a life insurance agent, has filed a petition in the office of the clerk of the United States district court asking that he be adjudged a bankrupt. The discrepancy between his assets and his liabilities are probably as great in proportion to the total amounts as those of any petitioner ever filed in the local office. The total value of his property is only $151.50, as stated in the petition, while he owes debts to the amount of $3,615. His creditors are mostly Hopkinsville firms, and individuals.—Owensboro Messenger.

AMUSEMENTS.

The "Isle of Spice," a melodious musical comedy that has had a long and successful run in Chicago, Boston and New York, will be heard in Hopkinsville soon, for the first time.

As is usual with all the B. C. Whitney productions, there is a wealth of scenery and beautiful costumes, a chorus of dainty maidens and some stunning show girls. The comedy throughout the piece is said to be unusually good and of the refined sort. The music, it is clean, is of the tuneful variety and quite likely to be heard long after the engagement here. The most prominent numbers are: "The Goo Goo Man," "Peggy Brady," "You and I," "Star of Fate," "Uncle Sam's Marines," "Mercenary May Ann," "The Broomstick Witches," and the quartette, "How Can You Tell 'Till You Try?"

Has Pneumonia.

Mr. R. E. Faulkner has been very ill of pneumonia at his home, near Herndon for several days. Yesterday his condition was reported slightly improved.

Make No Mistake!

Look for the Old Glass Corner Store.

The trouble that exists in the great battle fought by the farmers to control prices of their tobacco in this district kept a great many from buying during the season, and with the great quantity of merchandise we bought for the season we find we have quite a large stock of goods on hand. We fully realize that to do this the sacrifice must be great. No mincing, half hearted reduction, trying to get our money. In many instances slashing so low we only get a portion of it back.

Fashions Now Most Favored

SOME GOOD MODELS.

Such heaps of pretty things as we are regaled with this winter, and as many filmy summery stuffs as there are furs and velvets. For evening, women are loth to give up chiffons and like transparencies, and the dress makers have been moved to combine these with velvet to suit the taste of the day. The evening velvets bear the name chiffon, and are not the heavy fabrics of yesteryear. In their lightness and fineness they combine very beautifully with thin chiffon, some exquisite models are shown. One of the imported gowns is a princess of pale lavender chiffon velvet and chiffon, and strange as it may seem, the chiffon apparently forms the foundation, the velvet is built up over the delicate gauze. The edge of the skirt is of the velvet, then there are velvet panels set on over a chiffon skirt body. The bodice, if of accordion-plated chiffon trimmed with velvet in a way to fit to the form close at the waist line. The sleeves are of velvet, with trimming of chiffon. The velvet and chiffon are exactly the same shade.

The lingerie waists seem more delicate than ever, with the advance of winter, for the silk underslip worn with such a waist gives necessary warmth. The fancy now is to have the slip the color of the gown, toning in with it. And we would mention at once, lest we forget such an important matter, that a most attractive novelty has appeared in the way of a waist of Spanish lace, that dear, old-fashioned lace beloved of our mothers. Perhaps with a little searching we may be able to unearth a scarf or shawl of this latest fashion in laces, and lucky indeed should we count ourselves if we come upon enough to make an evening waist. One of the best Spanish lace models had for trimming folds of white velvet, the rich cream of the lace very lovely against the snowy pile of the heavier material.

The season's millinery is given over to velvets and roses, though rich beavers and felts are having their day, too; and the fur hat is with us, also the lace hat. Yesterday we were impressed by a paradox; that this is the day of studied simplicity in millinery, that this is the day of heavy trimming in millinery. For instance, we saw at one of the best shops a turban of brown mink; absolutely the only trimming it carried, a modest white gardenia, the velvet petals just lightly tinted with pink. The flower, to tell the truth, looked a trifle forlorn, as though it had inadvertently fallen on the fur-bearing animal; and yet it was a relief from the overburdened chapeaux nearby.

As to veils, as soon as they were promised, just that soon their doom was said to be sealed, because they were bound to be copied in such cheap imitations, the streets filled with bedraggled females in all stages of draggledness. Notwithstanding this dire forboding, we find the draped veil not wholly exiled by the fashionable, and we bear witness that the fashion is a pretty one and kindly.

Chiffon velvet is used for the velvet hats of the day, and not a few have for adornment a band of gold or silver braid. Headwork bands in the lovely blues and greens and old rose are very effective; one model brought to our notice used in combination with the bead band a single rose and a dark green plume. The word "artistic" has been much abused of late years, and still we are tempted to employ it in connection with the best of the winter hats.

Prevailing Styles of the Season

Gray is in highest favor, this quiet color pushed into the foreground; London, smoke, nickel, gull, the terms used to describe the quietest tones of the unobtrusive color—the quietest and most favored. And white is the choice for combining with the gray, the result attaining what some one speaks of as "grave chic." A soft gray broadcloth of richest satin sheen, worn with a waist of white net, and the hat a gray panne whose trimming is a single yellow rose and one white plume. The quiet elegance is charming, all strong contrast avoided.

In neckwear there is shown a liking for combining heavy and light materials, a heavy lace with fine net, very pretty chemisettes come in this style, and are worn unlined. The stores offer undersleeves of net, both lined and unlined, and the short-sleeved lady, if she have enough money, may easily solve the problem of piecing out the arm covering. A cream net appears to be preferred, and the sleeves as a rule are not elaborately trimmed; a bit of shirring of the net, the use of a row or two of lace. Of course these can be made at home satisfactorily and at small cost.

A pretty negligee is indispensable in my lady's wardrobe, and the one here illustrated is simple and pretty. It is made of veiling and bordered with a rather broad band of ribbon, and cut with double handkerchief points, the sleeves formed of the upper ones. At the neck is a broad collar of heavy lace, and a large soft bow fastens the dainty garment. The ribbon may be of the washable sort, or tacked on so it can easily be removed when the sack needs washing.

Though we have reached the point where we wonder we ever could have liked anything but the long, slender waist, we are called upon to contemplate very different lines, the Josephine dress, in the course of time we may grow accustomed to it again, but it will take some hard effort. The dressmakers say we shall have to, that the short-waisted Josephines and high-waisted Directoire styles are to oust the low bust and dip belts. The Empire coats have not proved so universally popular as prophesied, and we think it quite possible that the Josephines and Directoires may be classed with the other much exploited style.

There are, to be sure, some very beautiful Empire gowns to be seen among evening costumes. One lovely model was of citron-yellow panne embroidered in silver and bordered with a narrow band of dark fur. The short waist was of chiffon, the square neck and belt outlined in the dark fur. Lovely tea gowns in Empire style are on display, the fashion particularly adapted to a gown of this sort. And we must acknowledge that very fetching Empire evening cloaks are seen, those of white broadcloth especially good. Pink broadcloth is a favorite this season, the after-theater audience marked by the rosy blue wraps and headgear. And we would add that never have we feasted our eyes on such plumes as are now abroad, such coloring of ostrich feathers; there are shaded pinks and greens, lovely yellows, all tints of lavender, and most beautiful grays. We used to think the all white feathers very wonderful, now the dyers are giving us in millinery plumage a veritable feast of color. The all-pink hats are weighted down the old-rose have shaded plumes, the yellows are combined with browns. And the soft blendings of green are among the best harmonies of the season's offerings.

Prevailing Styles in Dress

PRETTY WINTER TOILETTES.

The other evening at the theater we were lucky enough to light upon a regular grand opera audience, women in bravest array. And they added greatly to the picture of light and beauty; we felt like giving them a vote of thanks. Let us see if we can remember some of the costumes in detail.

There was one lovely wrap of rose-colored broadcloth made kimono style. The charming girl that this adorned sported a hat of pink panne all beplumed in pale pink feathers, the plumes the only trimming, wreathed over and around the hat. Her wrap just escaped the ground, the neatest of pale tan suede slippers were disclosed.

Another costume of marked elegance was of black panne, a suit with blouse jacket. This coat had a waistcoat of white broadcloth, almost entirely veiled with bolero front of heavy cream lace. A very little exquisite gilt embroidery on the black panne gleamed near the shoulders, gave the final modish touch needed. The sleeves were elbow length, ending in frills of the rich lace. The hat was perfect, a largish black panne turned up sharply at one side and dropping low at the other. The sole trimming on the top was a band of gilt—the kind that costs money—wound about the crown and tied in a bow with long loops extending lengthwise of the hat; under the brim, of course, on the turned-up side, was a mass of black plumes. A muff of black and brown fur—Hudson bay sable—completed the toilette. The girl had brown eyes and hair, was tall and well rounded.

of distinctly high-bred appearance. She looked a picture, costume and girl perfectly in accord.

At the play the pale pink vied with old-rose, there were also some beautiful soft gray cloths. One of the latter was finest chiffon broadcloth trimmed with light chinchilla fur, the lining a pearl gray, with suggestion of pink. Worn with this was one of the beplumed pink hats, which seem the new "picture" headgear. And we may mention the kimono evening wrap appears the one in highest esteem, being especially appropriate for the slim girl.

A very attractive black panne gown, designed for street wear, was accompanied by a hat of black panne, with conical crown of the season and having a brim of moderate size; the trimming was a wreath of the middle-sized roses—also a feature of the season—in dull dahlia shades. Worn by a handsome woman of brunette type, it was most effective. Black in the richer materials is decidedly in fashion, and the thin black stuffs and lace are in excellent style. This morning we observed the models on display at one of the best shops, and noticed very pleasing combinations of black and white. There was a black net, princess style, fine vertical tucks shaping the gown at the waist line. It was made over a lining of white satin, the trimming black velvet and inserts of white lace, the lace on the large medallion order. A broad band of velvet edged the robe, the medallions were set off by velvet about the edges.

Some Fashions Now in Vogue

The nets and other sheer materials are appearing made with no small fullness about the hips, hanging in simple gathers from the waist. But the skirt is most artfully cut, there is none of the limpness of the plain full skirt of other days. Petticoat frills of fullness sufficient to hold the gown out made waist may be greatly improved by adding a bit of this ribbon to cuff and stock and the wearing of ribbon girdle to match. Though the princess styles are advancing, the wide girdle is substituted by not a few—those that feel the princess would not prove becoming. A black and gold ribbon is very good style, and the Japanese color combinations considered modish to a degree.

It is the rule to have the collar and cuffs of the wrap of velvet the same color as the body of the garment, and the velvet may, or may not be, embroidered. We lately saw a most attractive street suit of olive green broadcloth, the velvet collar and cuffs embroidered in olive and old rose shades. Some of the veils of the day shades.

A luxuriant fashion for house wear is the lingerie petticoat of wash-silk. It is strictly for house wear, being too soft to hold the heavier skirts out, designed especially for clinging styles, such as are favored for negligee dress. A white silk petticoat with full lace-edged flounces is lovely, much prettier than a muslin; it does not cost a great deal more, either, and will wear well. The silk underslips worn with lingerie waists may be made in white or colors, and there are several ways of making. One is a plain model without darts, the sleeves quite full, to hold out the waist sleeve, and reaching only to the elbow; this sort buttoning in the back. Then there is the kind that fits the figure closely, may fasten either front or back, the sleeves elbow or so fashioned they will do duty with long or short outer sleeve; this attained by leaving the under-arm seam open from elbow to wrist, a hook and eye confining it when used with long sleeve, the lower part turned under when an elbow sleeve is desired.

In our illustration we present a model of basqued Russian coat for the street suit of severe simplicity. It is tight-fitting in the back, the fronts blouse a little, the opening is slightly at one side. This model has a neat tailored look, the hat pictured very appropriate with it.

well give an ample look, are worn, though the threatened hoop has sunk into retirement.

Velvet trimmings are used very considerably, a wide velvet band at the bottom of the dress much approved by the dressmakers. And a hint to the wise concerning remodeling an old gown by this use of velvet may come in part; so often the bottom of the worn skirt has to be cut off; it is such a problem how to obtain the required length. Fashion is kindly in this respect now. And speaking of trimmings, chenille embroidery is used on cloth, a very handsome addition to a dress; often a bit of metal or glass will be introduced in the embroidery, this the day of gilt and jet. Ribbons, long prophesied, seem actually coming forward for dress ornamentation, the flowered designs favored. A ready-

HENS PAY MISSIONARIES

Eggs Laid On Sunday Will Support Evangelists to Japan.

Danville, Ky., Jan. 7.—Nonunion Hens which have no objection to working on Sunday when the work merely consists in "laying around," will support four soldiers of the cross who will start for Japan early in the spring to impress upon the benighted citizens of that land, who believe that the spirits of their ancestors enabled them to prevail against the sacred Ikonis of Russia, the doctrines of the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

These four missionaries will be supported by the proceeds of eggs laid on Sunday. Last October the women of the Bethel Cumberland Presbyterian church, located in the midst of an agricultural district ten miles south of this city, at the suggestion of Mrs. Nannie Caldwell Helm, voted to set aside all the eggs laid on Sunday for the mission fund, even at the risk of raising the cry of tainted money.

At once it seemed as if every hen in the district started out to lay on Sunday. No matter how infrequently eggs appeared in the nests during the week, the pastor while preaching his Sunday sermon always heard the noisy cackling in neighboring farmyards which told him that the mission fund was increasing. The report for the fiscal year shows that the church has raised $21,000 for missions, a sum unheard of before the Sunday egg scheme was put into operation, and the good work still goes on.

Takes Unto Himself a Bride in Clarksville.

Thomas J. Harlan, special agent of the L. & N., with headquarters at Memphis, and Miss Sue Coulter, daughter of John B. Coulter, of Clarksville, were married Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride.

The groom is well known in Hopkinsville. He was formerly special agent on the Henderson division of the L. & N. road, but was transferred about two years ago to the Memphis division.

UNEXPECTED DEATH

Of Little Son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyd.

Little Edwin Cayce Boyd, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boyd, of Church Hill, died last Thursday. The child had not been well for two weeks with stomach trouble but his parents did not think he was in a serious condition. Thursday morning he was suddenly taken quite ill and died in a few hours. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd have the deepest sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances. The remains were brought here yesterday and interred in Hopewell.

LARGE AUDIENCES.

Always Attracted by the Cleveland Ladies' Orchestra.

In addition to Mr. Metzendorf, violin soloist, will the Cleveland Ladies' Orchestra, which will appear at the Tabernacle Jan. 18, the company offers E. Ralphena Parsons, greatest of all lady trombonists, and Glenora Johnson, cornet soloist of unusual merit and reputation; Mr. Bechtel Alcock, a tenor with both artistic ability and delightful personality. We give below a few excerpts from the many flattering notices of this superior organization:

Grand Rapids—the Andante and last movement of Mendelssohn's Concerto showed Mr. Metzendorf to be possessed of excellent bowing, a fine smooth tone, and true musical temperament.

Cleveland, O.—Miss Parsons' execution is clean-cut and smooth. She is a thorough artist. No better trombonist ever delighted a Cleveland audience.

Cincinnati, O.—Miss Parsons is the leading lady trombonist of the country. She stands without a peer.

Detroit, Mich.—The Cleveland Orchestra never fails to attract large audiences. Their ensemble is well-nigh perfect, and they play with surprising ease and forcefulness. They are far above the standard the general public accepts from women instrumentalists and are a distinct credit to Cleveland.

HERMAN'S BILL.

Will Try to Have Better Cars for Colored Democrats.

Representative Herman Southall, of Christian, has a cold. He also has a hobby. Southall lives in a county that has 3,500 negro voters. He got some of these—he really couldn't say how many. Anyway, he promised—in order to be elected, according to the opposition—that he would see that the colored people got as good accommodation as white people in railway trains. He will introduce a bill to cover his case. In fact some of his friends are so glad to see him here they are willing to do anything that will tend to perpetuate his tenure in office, and to aid Democracy in Christian.—State Journal.

An eminent professor of the United States Agricultural Department has been studying the hen. Think of writing books on hens. Listen to this! The American hen produces more in dollars and cents, than all the gold and silver mines in the country combined; and if the value of the hens be added, the aggregate is twice the annual yield of all the gold and silver mines and six times the value of the wool crop.

The most independent man on earth is the farmer, for he makes the earth yield him almost everything needed for life. He knows that as he sows so will he reap. He usually keeps strong and healthy with constant strife with nature—in sunshine and in pure air. At sundown, when work is done, he finds most refreshing sleep in bed, such as only a tired man knows. In the same way that the earth yields food for man, so does it provide remedies for human ills. Thousands of households throughout the farming districts of the United States know the value of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is nature's most valuable and health-giving agent—made without the use of alcohol. It contains roots, herbs and barks, and is the concentration of nature's vitality as found in the fields and woods. This remedy has a history which speaks well for it because it was given to the public by Dr. E. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., nearly forty years ago, and has since been sold by druggists in ever increasing quantities. Some medicine enjoy a large sale for a few years, then disappear from the public attention, but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved such a reliable blood remedy and tonic that it often enjoys the confidence of several generations in a family, and its increased sales year by year coming from the recommendations of those who have tried it, prove its lasting merit, so that every bottle bears the stamp of public approval. Moreover, Dr. Pierce guarantees that it contains no alcohol or narcotic.

Hon. John E. Smith, Registrar of Deeds, Court House, Durham, N. C., writes: "We have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in our family, and have known of some of our neighbors using it. We have always found it to do all that is claimed for it, and feel confident that it is a splendid remedy."

Mrs. Bettie Mill, of Cotton, N. C., writes: "I procured Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and took it for my cough. The medicine acted like a charm; cured my cough all O. K. I feel very grateful to you for your kindness. Use my name if you choose."

Do you know your own system? A complete medical book and physiology of the body, is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, which can be had for the price of postage. Send Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 31 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound book, or 21 stamps for the paper-bound volume of 1008 pages.
